

Haydn Triptychon:
Trio Concertante in B-flat Major, Hob. IV (1979)

Dieter Einfeldt

"The Haydn Triptychon was composed during 1979–1981 at the request of the Verdehr Trio. Since there are few effective compositions for violin, clarinet, and piano in the eighteenth-century Classical repertoire, the three Haydn Trios, Hoboken IV: No. 1 and 2 in E-flat major and No. 3 in B-flat major which were probably composed in 1781, were reworked for the combination of the Verdehr Trio while retaining much of the stylistic character of the original short divertimenti. Since, however, the original trios displayed some signs characteristic of sketches (each of the three trios takes only about seven minutes), the form was enlarged: the violin and clarinet parts were made more virtuoso in the sense of the late Classical period and a full-blown piano part was developed.

The Haydn Triptychon is, therefore, not a transcription but a new creation which only utilizes the themes of the Haydn originals and treats them very freely. Introductions, variations, longer development sections, and virtuoso codas are new compositions of this composer.

The raison d'être of such a classic adaptation arises from the fact that ensembles with unusual instrumental combinations which have been formed during our time cannot find much effective and idiomatic literature from all of the important musical periods. The Haydn Triptychon should help fill the gap in the Classical style for the repertoire of the clarinet-violin-piano combination. Trio Concertante is the third of three trios comprising the Triptychon."
